Diplomatic Washington at Loss to Predict Foreign Policy.

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Dec. 24.—Diplomatic Washington is having a hard time getting accurate information for the various governments of the world, the fact that the administration in matters of foreign policy.

The folks who watch the fluctuation of the market from day to day have a "clink" compared to the ambassadors and ministers who scrutinize the daily dispatches from the various governments of the world.

Ministers Not Cynical.

Of one thing Mr. Harding ought to be glad. Hopeful that the best of diplomats here that will evolve something that will bring Europe and America closer together.

America Given Opportunity.

Great Britain, Geneva, meeting of the assembly of league of nations that it would be more discreet to leave the covenant maintenance to the American people.

Mr. George Espinasse.

Prime Minister Lloyd George's speech in London to the delegates who returned from the Geneva meeting is a pointed explanation of the British policy.

But Europe is not interested in a new debating society or a new paper organization like the League tribunal proved to be.

Diplomats thus far not bawled a guess but the significant thing is that the big powers in the present league have virtually agreed to accept American suggestions for careful consideration and to endeavor to convert the trading administration to a closer participation in European affairs than the campaign speeches would seem to indicate.

Editor Gazette:

It was with some degree of interest that I read your editorial in the Gazette of Dec. 13, 1920, on the subject of city manager and your return to the "brickbat" and "bullet" and spirit that anything that was established in 1882 is good enough for the city now.

I am myself an advocate of the city manager plan of city government, and I heartily agree with you as to the points which you raise in your editorial. I can only express myself much more so in favor of it than you have done in your editorial, but I believe in placing credit where credit is due.

You must remember that the city manager plan alone does not make an efficient city government. The city manager must be just as successful as the manager plan if you get the right people to manage the city affairs.

I want to call your attention to the manner in which the affairs of the Janesville Water department are conducted. This utility has now been the property of the city of Janesville since April 1, 1915.

I am more than pleased that you give Mr. Sartell credit for his excellent initiative in organizing the city, but to believe that you do Mr. Sartell a very serious injustice and perhaps an undesired actual harm.

Governor Elect John J. Blaine has given Beloit an opinion which sets at rest the controversy regarding the attempt of Illinois to annex a part of the Line county and the claim of a defective boundary line.

Mr. Blaine says there are other cases of boundary disputes in which Wisconsin is interested, but it is altogether probable that the present lines will be declared permanent.

A SWEETHEART AT THIRTY

The Story of a Woman's Transformation
BY MARION RUBINCAM

CHAPTER XXIX. LETTERS FROM HOME

Next day we indulged ourselves in the great luxury of lying in bed until 8 o'clock. Then we ate the rest of the sandwiches and I... But both of us had counter-appeal, and we had money enough for simple necessities, so we went out and went to a place we found a little restaurant and there we ordered eggs and coffee, and felt better.

"This is the second time I've been in a restaurant," Violet whispered, looking about the little place curiously. "That one Dad took us to yesterday was the first. Just wait, Aunt Fanny, before we're through, we're going to eat in every restaurant in New York."

"Good Lord, child, what an ambition!" I smiled.

This day was given over to sight-seeing. But first we went back to our room.

"It is dingy," I said, critical for the first time. I looked about it, the faded tan walls, the ornate lace curtains, clean enough, but with a grayish tinge that would have shocked the soul of any country woman brought up to sun-blenched cloths. They were torn, too, in dozens of places, and the carpet was worn to the back. It, too, was a faded tan, and the counterpane had also the gray cleanliness that comes from careless washing and too long drying.

Violet went to the closet and took down my Paisley shawl, a possession of my mother's, she mounted a chair and hung it against the wall, twisting the fringe in same tricks to catch the light. I saw a gorgeous pattern on the long bare wall.

Then the girl, her eyes alight with inspiration, she took the big patch-work quilt Esther had sent with us, and flung it over the terrible counterpane. Last, she brought out her velvet skirt and threw it over the bureau.

"There," she said, stepping back to view the room.

And, indeed, with those three things she had turned a piece of dingy ugliness into one of life and color.

"Violet had the homemaker's touch. It was never so much what she did, as the way she did it. The woman who has that touch carries a magic wand with her, to transform barren places into comfortable homes. Such a woman has a hundred times more chance of being happy than the one who accepts the ugly places, and complains of them, without trying to better them."

But the girl herself, more than her actions, worked the transformation. Violet was so alive, she glowed with health, and radiated happiness. But her influence, too, because the sense of oppression that Esther exercised began to lift. I too, found myself feeling lighter and happier.

"At this moment there was a knock, and Mrs. Tupper put her head in the doorway, around which I had to guess these are for you," and she laid out a couple of envelopes. "I see they're both addressed to me. One's Miss Violet. Is that how it's pronounced—'Haines'?"

"Yes, Miss Violet," I answered, holding out my hand. "I'm Miss Violet's aunt."

"I thought you wasn't her mother. I told 'em so too. Then at the door I asked me last night, when you went in, I says I know you wasn't married."

"She did not say I looked like an old maid, Henry," Violet said, scarcely having time to consider.

"I see you been doing things to the room," she went on. "Of course if you mind—"

"Mind? On no. I never take no one but nice people. And nice people are always nice. And you were on a body's carpet. I would have fixed up the room myself. But since my last operation I can't do things."

"Operation?" I asked politely, wanting to read my letter. "Yes, my last. How does it sit up with the curiously eager gleam of her species—the sort of woman who delights in talking of serious operations that she has endured. I have found that such women feel a curious aura of romance and importance attached to them, that grows with each operation. In such sections of the city, the more operations a woman has had, the greater her social importance."

"Yes, my last. I had a ligament took out. And ever since I can't bend over much without falling and getting weak. Before that I had an operation right after my last baby was born." She gave us some intimate details of this, to which I listened. Violet turned her back and calmly read her letter.

"And after that I couldn't stand upon ladders without getting dizzy. So sometimes there ain't so much cleaning on the walls as I'd like to see. I keep a very clean house. But of course I have to depend on help to scrub surfaces. Seem's as I can't stoop over 'em."

"How old are you?" I asked.

"She had been so frank I dared ask her this."

"Not so old, not like I look. I was 37 last birthday. That was a month ago. I used to look real young. But I kept havin' operations. I've had my appendix out—that's real lousy. And adenoids. But they ain't much of an operation. They don't give either. And the ligament—that the kidney—that was after the baby come. And I've had six teeth out in one year."

"Was there much of her left, I wondered? I looked at her curiously. If I looked 70, she looked 60. Thirty-seven!"

But I turned to my letter, anxious to know what made Esther write so soon. It could not be anything pleasant on a body's carpet. I would have fixed up the room myself. But since

HAIR PILED IN SIMPLE FASHION HIGH ON THE HEAD IS POPULAR NEW STYLE

By ELOISE.

We Americans are less given to the very elaborate hair ornaments of our French and English cousins, who in turn take them from the Oriental or Asiatic women. Once our little girls wore a ribbon in their hair as a token of girlishness, but even so simple a fashion quickly passed out.

The novelist who makes the heroine put a rose in her locks should be writing of our next-door neighbors, the South American state for we, at this end of the continent, neglect such adornment. We are more practical, moreover, and know that roses soon fade, and withering give us the look of age and disillusionment.

Here is the kind of coiffure which the American woman likes better than any other. It can be adapted from year to year to fit the changing fancy and yet it is distinctive enough. Just now it is the popular fashion for evening and formal wear. The hair, unless naturally curly, can be marcelled to look just as pretty as this. It is parted on the side, combed back low over the forehead and ears and piled softly and prettily high at the back, making a charming profile. The high coiffure is coming back just now after all the girls have bobbed their hair.

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON.
Letters May be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have a very difficult problem which for two years I have been unable to solve, although I have studied it from practically all known angles and have tried every remedy that I know without a particle of success. Briefly it is this:

My wife possesses a temper which she is unable to control or at least makes no effort to do so. I presume I do not have to tell you how unbearable are some of the situations which she creates. We have two small children and the least thing that either of them does which does not exactly correspond to her prevailing state of mind is resented by her with an outburst of feeling which I, as her husband, can truthfully say is very disagreeable. She also is very talkative and makes it a point to combine the two with what result you can readily imagine. At times I think this condition is nervousness, but not being a connoisseur of character I cannot prescribe a remedy. I have a substantial income, provide a good home for her and the children and do not believe anything in my actions or words prompts her to a display of this feeling. She is healthy and so are the children and I cannot understand why she persists in making everything so disagreeable. I have talked to her, trying to explain that such actions are not very good "friend-makers," but in this also I have failed. We are practically strangers in the city, having come here about a year ago, and have no relatives here except a few friends.

probably due to her unsettled ways.

UNCERTAIN.

You cannot expect to make over your wife's nature, but you can do what will be to avoid friction by your own tact. An occasional vacation would also help. When your wife seems tired, a little trip would do her good.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of 18 and a boy and I were once good friends. In some way we were broken up, neither one of us knows how or why. I still love him more than ever. Can you please tell me how I can break him and the other girl up? I will not go with anyone but him.

He speaks when we meet, but that is all. Do you think he would think more of me if I should give him a little Christmas present? If so, what would be nice to give him?

BLUE EYES.

The young man grew tired of you, and now it would be worse than useless to try to win him back. He is interested in someone else and it is beyond your power to control his actions. Do not send him a Christmas present. You would be running after him and he would think less of you instead of more.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Is a boy supposed to ask a girl what she would like for Christmas?

Is it proper for a girl to make a young man a present if she has known him half a year, but is not engaged to him? Would a box of assorted nuts be all right?

NOT ENGAGED.

The boy is not supposed to ask the girl what she would like for Christmas.

It would be all right for the girl to give the boy some trifling present. A box of assorted nuts would be all right, especially if the girl prepared them herself.

WHAT SHALL I DO?

Answered by VIRGINIA PAGE

A "Party" Dinner

"Dear Miss Page—What can I do to the regular dinner to make it seem more like a party on Christmas, or a fruit cocktail (see your recipe book for directions for making); individual molds of cranberry jelly looks pretty and taste very good with the turkey; poured little fluted paper cups full of salted almonds may be placed at each cover; then serve the coffee with the dessert; and add mints.

A Special Treat

"Dear Miss Page—My children have been invited to a New Year's Eve party and are wild to go. But I don't like them to be up so late. They are only 13 and 15. What do you think?—Mother of Two."

I quite agree with you that children the age of yours should be in bed long before midnight. But since New Year's Eve comes but once a year, and to miss a friend's party is such a heart-breaking thing when we are only 13 and 15, I think I would let them go, properly chaperoned, party to be properly chaperoned.

But I would make it very clear beforehand, however, that you are

YOUTHFUL COAT OF NUTRIA FOR THAT PRETTY DAUGHTER

If sub-debs and their older sisters wrote letters to Santa Claus it is pretty sure to say that almost every letter would ask for a fur coat, please. There are few of Eve's daughters nowadays who do not want fur coats, although it's a long way from the tip of the tail to the fur coat. They become particularly popular at Christmas time.

Here is a smart, youthful model of nutria which will please even the most exacting young miss. It is somewhat longer than the very short sports coats, but it is not long enough to be clumsy, and with its deep pockets and luxurious collar it is altogether delightful in winter snows and winds. There are wide fine sleeves, a wide belt, large round fur buttons and then there is a small round muff of nutria to complete the brown effect.

RECIPES FOR A DAY.

Potato Puff with Bacon.—This is a favorite left over mashed potato dish. Measure the amount of mashed potatoes which you have left, add an equal quantity of milk. To one cup potato use one cup of milk. Add the yolk of one egg and salt and pepper to taste. Mix thoroughly and then fold in lightly the white of one egg beaten stiff.

Turn mixture into a greased baking dish. Cut two thin slices bacon into one-inch pieces and arrange on top of potato mixture. Bake in a moderate oven for twenty minutes.

Lettuce and Russian Dressing.—Arrange lettuce hearts on salad plates and serve with Russian dressing. Recipe for dressing:

One egg yolk, three-quarters cup salad oil, two tablespoons vinegar, one-half tablespoon mustard, one-half teaspoon salt, two tablespoons finely chopped onion, one-half tablespoon finely chopped parsley. Mix mustard and salt together, add one teaspoon vinegar and the egg yolk and beat with an egg beater. Add the oil drop by drop at first until one-half of the oil has been added. Then oil may be added more rapidly until all is used. When mixture becomes thick add the vinegar a little at a time to thin it to the right consistency. Just before serving the salad combine the salad dressing and the finely chopped pepper, onion and parsley.

Squash Tarts.—Make a plain pie pastry, using one and one-half cups flour, one-quarter cup lard, one-quarter cup butter, one-half teaspoon salt, cold water to make a dough. Roll deep muffin tin or tart molds with deep muffin tin and fill with the following mixture:

One and one-quarter cups of steamed and strained squash, one-half cup brown sugar, one-half teaspoon ginger, one teaspoon cinnamon, one egg, one cup milk.

Mix sugar, salt and spice, add squash, egg slightly beaten and milk gradually. Pour into the pastry molds and bake in a moderate oven until firm. Cover tarts when with meringue made of one stiffly beaten egg white and two tablespoons sugar and return to the oven to brown.

SALMON RECIPES

Salmon Soup.—One-third can salmon, one quart scalded milk, two tablespoons butter, four tablespoons flour, one and one-half teaspoons salt, dash of pepper. Drain oil from salmon and remove bones and skin. Rub through a sieve. Gradually move the scalded milk, season and bird.

The remainder of this can may be used another day for salad.

Salmon Croquettes.—Bone salmon and mince with a silver fork. Add salt, pepper and lemon juice to suit taste, and enough dry bread crumbs so it will hold well together. Shape into croquettes. Dip in bread crumbs and beaten egg, and again in crumbs and fry a golden brown.

Deviled Salmon.—Bone a can of salmon and flake. Add three hard boiled eggs chopped fine. Season with salt and pepper and a little chopped parsley. Make a white sauce of one tablespoon butter, one tablespoon flour, one cup milk. Mix with salmon and egg.

FANS READY FOR HOT STOVE TALK CHRISTMAS DAY

The hot stove league is in session now. In big league baseball the dope is trades and wondering what will happen to the guilty White Sox players and how Jim Gleason will gather another star aggregation for Chicago American league fans.

Shortly after the holidays it is believed that the big league leaders will settle down in earnest, do less gibbering and more active trade dealings. From St. Louis again comes the report that Roger Hornsby will be placed on the market. The second baseman should bring a record price in baseball dealings around $150,000. Hornsby has always been hotfoot after the St. Louis star and wanted him badly last summer. Hornsby is now so satisfied with his berth in St. Louis.

McGraw is still pursuing his favorite policy of making dollars out of cents. Instead of developing one, he is after Heinie Groh of the Reds. The Giants have offered $150,000 for him. In turn the Reds are offering $100,000 for Groh. The Pirates want Larry Kopf of the Cincinnati shortstop.

Kid Gleason is in the market for some stars to replace the right Sox regulars. He will have to buy two or three infielders and a trio of pitchers if he hopes to land in line with the Sox next year. It is a cinch that Gleason will never be lucky enough to find six or seven new stars from the bushes ready to fill in for the regulars. He may find talent but it will not be experience.

August Hermann, president of the Cincinnati club, said that the Reds either trade or sell Groh, or Eddie Roush, a fielder.

Here at Sanson. Turning from the big leagues, Janesville fans are sitting around the hot stove talking baseball for the season next year. The good portion of the baseball stand served here last season just wicketed the appetite of the fans here for even better baseball next summer.

Shook, Schwind, Brockbridge, Holland, Lathrop and Perring are still around Janesville. Seale is in Chicago and is favorable to come back. Dumont's future is doubtful. Quitting baseball for he is decidedly interested in his job down at the big plant. Holland is a mighty sharp and keen player, he has got to talking about quitting the game. However, the former pitcher has many years of class baseball left in him, for there was not a more steady and reliable player on the Sanson club than Holland last year. Schwind is just getting over a broken finger suffered in a game with Kenosha last year. Shook's broken digit has healed and the crisp arm of the "cracker" should be O. K. next spring.

ROCKFORD CUE STAR WINS CHAMPIONSHIP

He contemplates leaving for the United States after the cup matches, the message said.

Clergymen May Be Doctors to Make Money

London.—A controversy is on among the poorer paid section of clergymen who find themselves hard hit by the high cost of living over a novel suggestion put forward by Dr. Robert Rentoul, a prominent Liverpool practitioner, that the clergymen could augment their incomes by acting as doctors as well as parsons. Dr. Rentoul advises young clergymen to study medicine; take their degree and combine body-curing with soul-saving work. Many clergymen do not look with favor on the idea. They argue that they have plenty to do already and that local practitioners would bitterly resent competition from them. One wants to know where a poor curate is to raise the 250 pounds necessary to qualify for a medical degree, and others hold that within a month the clerical-medical's sermons would be thin, and that the soul would suffer at the expense of the body.

Lynch went into seclusion after the fight Wednesday, in which he triumphed over Pete Herman.

A tour of the country, in which he will meet many bantamweight aspirants, is being planned, Egan said. "One thing is sure," he added, "he will not go to England; the little old U. S. A. is big enough for us."

Two games will be played by the Janesville All Stars on Christmas, the afternoon game being with the Frank corps five and in the evening against a strong Beloit club.

The game will have the following men to meet Beloit: Grasslin, Dick, Puellen, Schilling, Graf, Anderson, Marko, Cullen, P. Grasslin, and Hager. This game will start at 8:12 o'clock.

Coach Walter Steffen will be brought from his home in Chicago early in the spring to attend one of these meetings.

Natchez, Miss., Dec. 24.—Tucker Gibson, known as the champion big game hunter of Texas parish, Louisiana, claims he owns a pig which he uses in the capacity of a bird dog, and asserts the pig makes perfect stands and never flushes a covey of birds.

Mr. Gibson said that soon after the birth of the pig, on the death of his mother, it was adopted by a pointer dog with a litter of pups and that the pig continued to associate with its foster-brothers and sisters after it became well grown. He declared that the hunting proclivities of the pig were accidentally discovered the first time the young dogs were taken to the field, the pig accompanying the party and taking an animated part in the hunt.

DALTON'S PACKERS TRIM FAIRIES IN TIGHT GAME, 15-19

"Hotsey" Dalton's Green Bay Packers trimmed the Beloit Fairies in Beloit last night, winning in a last minute spurt by the score of 15 to 19. The northern aggregation outclassed the Beloit club during the greater part of the game through the whirlwind playing of Wilson at center, whom the whole Beloit club could not stop.

The first half was easy for the Green Bay team for they ran circles around the Fairies, scoring 10 to a lone field throw for 2 for Beloit.

Have Beloit Dizzy

The short passing and hard dribbling of Dalton's team had the Fairies block shifts. The Packers fed the ball to Wilson who had no trouble dodging the Beloit guards. In the second half the Fairies sprang and by a series of long shots had the score tied with three minutes to play. There was a halt called and both teams conferred on the last effort to win. With a rush and a little luck, the Packers clinched the game.

Our Big Christmas Savings Club

It Answers This Puzzling Question:

Did You Have Enough Money to Spend This Christmas?

Were you able to do all the little things you would like to have done? Were all your family, friends and associates remembered this Holiday season just as you would have wished? Wouldn't a little extra money have come in handy?

You Will Want Money to Spend Next Christmas. You Can Have Plenty If You Join Our Christmas Savings Club, Starting Monday, December 27, 1920

A Check Which You May Cash Anywhere Will Be Mailed To Your Home Next December.

Join Yourself. Get Your Friends to Join. Everybody Welcome. No Charge to Join.

Start to save now for next Christmas. The Christmas Savings Club will be comprised of a number of members who will save with the object of having money for next Christmas. The plan of saving as we have evolved it is exceedingly simple and easy. Make a small deposit each week or pay a month in advance and when the club matures next December you will be agreeably surprised at the snug little sum you have accumulated, made larger by interest added. Plans to suit every purse are offered depositors. Everybody welcome. Here are three plans that will appeal to a good many people.

Deposit 1c the first week and increase the deposit 1c each week and we will pay you $12.75 with interest next Christmas.

This plan requires a deposit of 1c the first week, 2c the second week, 3c the third, and increases the amount 1c each week. On December 13th, 1921, there will be due you $12.75 with interest.

Deposit 2c the first week, 4c the next week, 6c the third week and increase the deposit 2c each week and we will pay you $25.50 with interest next Christmas.

This plan requires a deposit of 2c the first week, 4c the second week, 6c the third week, and increases the amount by 2c each week. On December 13th, 1921, there will be due you $25.50 with interest.

Deposit 5c the First Week and Increase the Deposit 5c Per Week and We Will Pay You $63.75 With Interest Next Christmas.

This plan requires a deposit of 5c the first week, 10c the second week and increases the amount by 5c each week. On December 13th, 1921, there will be due you $63.75 with interest.

The three plans mentioned are merely suggestions. You may reverse them if you wish, that is $2.50, $1.00 or 50c may be paid in the first week and reduced 5c, 2c or 1c a week until the end of the fifty weeks.

Or here's another plan: $5.00, $2.50, $2.00, $1.00, 50c, 25c or 10c may be paid in each week without reduction or increase for the fifty weeks if desired.

Interest will be paid on deposits if the payments are kept up promptly, but if depositor fails to keep up payments when due, you will receive amount paid in only, without interest.

Member's tickets issued to each depositor without cost.

The Christmas Savings Club is the one club, that all members of your family, large and small, can join.

When you join, take out a card for the boy and girl, too. This is a nest egg to ease care and will come in mighty handy for a rainy day.

The small weekly or monthly payments don't amount to very much and are never missed. Surprising how much it comes to by Christmas Holidays, and a pleasant surprise, too. Come with others and join; the club opens for membership Monday morning, Dec. 27th, at 9 o'clock. The earlier you join the easier it will be. Hundreds will join the first day. Get in line for a Merry Christmas. The easiest way in the world to provide Christmas cheer for you and yours.

Your Christmas Check From This Bank You May Cash Anywhere. It Will Be Delivered at Your Door By Uncle Sam

NOTE: Some $48,000 were distributed to members of last year's Christmas Savings Club. We wish it could have been $100,000 so that the added cheer the increase amount would have brought about could have been spread broadcast. Present indications point toward a much larger membership this year and it is quite possible that the $100,000 mark will be reached.

Navigable Belt from St. Lawrence to Gulf Is Predicted by Engineers

Map shows the water-way from mouth of St. Lawrence to Gulf, as seen in near future by government authorities, and the vast territory which will be tributary to the waterway.

Chicago.—Chicago is destined to become the "hub" of a navigable water belt which will extend from the Gulf of Mexico via the Mississippi river, the Illinois waterway, the Great Lakes, and the St. Lawrence to the Atlantic ocean, according to government experts.

Chicago civic, industrial and commercial interests, through the Association of Commerce, the Commercial club and other organizations are preparing to make early and intensive study of plans developed to a basic working point by Col. William V. Judson, engineer of the northwestern division.

Colonel Judson's study calls for the acquisition and use of Wolf lake in the establishment of an "Illiana harbor." His plan has been approved by the board of engineers for rivers and harbors, and concurred in by the chief of engineers of the war department.

It is fair to anticipate that in from ten to fifteen years there will be a navigable water belt from the Gulf of Mexico reaching to the Atlantic at the Gulf of St. Lawrence," Colonel Judson says.

"All commerce between the seaboard and points west and northwest must traverse it or cross it on the way to or from the sea, and it is the sufficient economy in water transportation and in handling a large part will be diverted from rail to water and seek port for export by the cheaper route," says the chief of engineers.

"At the very buckle of the belt where two parts of the through route come together lies Chicago. At this point, Chicago, already the greatest rail center of the world, and seemingly destined soon to become the western terminus of great ocean routes and also the northern terminus of one of the greatest of inland waterways leading to the Gulf of Mexico, there must necessarily be great and continually increasing provision for the transfer of freight.

Points Need of Vast Harbor.

"This interchange must be carried on in the most economical and expeditious way so that vessels and cars may have the quickest turn-around."

"Fortunately there is a break in the middle of the water front between the Illinois Steel company plant and Gary which is not yet used for industrial purposes."

"This undeveloped water front is some three and one-half miles long. The area just back of it, covered by Wolf lake, Lake George, and nearby marshy regions, is about six square miles in extent. The fore-shore of Lake Michigan at this point is reasonably shallow, and is already publicly owned."

"A part of this frontage and land lying submerged by the small lakes is in Indiana. There is the best of reason for believing there is no constitutional objection to concurrence on the part of these two states in creating and endowing with sufficient powers a joint harbor commission under whose administration harbor facilities might be established."

American Architect Named to Restore Historic Louvain

New York.—The Louvain shall arise again more splendid and more beautiful," So said Whitney Warren, architect, when he announced definitely that he would undertake the restoration of the famed seat of learning.

Warren sketched the plans for the rebuilding of the University of Louvain, which was destroyed on the night of August 27, 1914, by the German hordes in their invasion of Belgium. He said he would soon send a representative to Louvain to survey the ruin and after forming tentative plans he would go personally to Louvain to plan the restoration.

"I shall be happy to take up this work," he said. "It is most necessary for the honor of America and in recognition of the great service the Louvain has rendered to humanity to make good on the project."

Funds are lacking, he said. The national committee of the United States for the restoration of the Louvain, of which Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, is chairman, has started to raise $500,000 for the restoration of the library.

"Of this amount about $150,000 has been raised," said Warren. "It is now the duty of every American university which is consciously or unconsciously bound to the Louvain to assist."

Warren explained that the appointment was unexpected, and consequently he had not formulated any preliminary plans. However, he said, his work would be more of restoring the university than of rebuilding it.

"Every tradition that has grown about the institution since it was founded in 1426 will be respected; every stone that can be replaced will be utilized," he asserted.

The message to Warren from M. Vidor, vice-president of the French-

Whitney Warren.

Belgian committee for the restoration of the Louvain, said his appointment had been approved at both Louvain and Paris. Warren was honored once before by the French government when he received the Order of the Legion of Honor. In 1913, upon the completion of the Grand Central Terminal, which he designed, he received the congratulations of the Academy of Fine Arts at Paris for his masterful work.

"Sentenced to Death"

months are up. Either Allan will be at home or—he won't come at all. There is no need for further search. I would go north with you over Christmas, Vivian, but I must be here every night and every day so that when Allan comes he will have some one to look after him.

Mr. Canfield rose to go. Mr. Wakefield twisted the curtain in his hand. Miss Vivian sat and stared at Mrs. Wakefield for a brief moment and then went over and kissed her.

"Good night, Mr. Canfield," said Mr. Wakefield.

Mr. Canfield went out alone. No one looked at him or paid the slightest attention. His face was rather red but his redness was for no other reason. It was a great disappointment to him that he had not been able to see Mrs. Canfield and the trip looked inviting.

When the door had closed after him, Miss Vivian rose. She was very tall. She had wonderfully pretty eyes. She was not pretty enough to be in the Sunday supplements for beauty alone, her appearance there coming from the unusualness of her features and the way in which they were set in her face. She was a very capable and responsible young lady. Then he looked again and saw the tears falling and the look of pain and he remembered as the "Cotton girl" who used to play around with the other children ages and ages ago it seemed.

Mrs. Wakefield sat still, wordless, still looking at her hands. But she was the first to speak.

"I hope you have a nice, lovely time, Vivian. I wanted to go too, in fact I have wanted for a long time to get away from a Christmas here especially by this year—but—Good bye, dear."

Vivian had suddenly bent over and kissed her and was on her way out, returning to give Mr. Wakefield a handshake in silence.

When she had gone John Wakefield went over to his wife and kneeling at her feet took her thin hands in his.

IV.

That was an open winter in the North woods. So open that the logging bosses were at their wits' end how to get the lumber to the tracks. There was no snow to carry the sleds and part of the time it was so clear and cold that men were reluctant to work. It's different when the snow is deep. No matter how cold, deep snow and logging go together.

Uncle Griffin Gyp returned from a mysterious trip which he had made on the afternoon of the day a week before Christmas. He had made several of these trips but he was well versed in diplomacy—had the education and the opportunity he would have made an excellent minister to Mexico—that he was able to be perfectly frank and at the same time tell nothing. He was bubbling over with enthusiasm as he came into the kitchen of the Gyp home over the stove and danced Mrs. Gyp around the room in a Highland fling. He got the bagpipes out after supper and played so noisily that some of the wiser ones determined that he was calling at a mountain still known to be somewhere in the deep forest near the Carson camp.

"It's a miracle," says T. "remarked Mr. Gyp to his wife. "He ain't well yet, not by a long shot; maybe he won't ever be ready to go back to that Pittsburgh where the smoke is so thick one has to shovel it away, but he's coming. He's skatin' in the mornin', skatin' at noon, skatin' after supper. He's had adventures. He's lost a horse, a place and been shot at and he's killed his one buck—keepin' strict in the law. And he's gottin' homesick. Maybe it's the Christmas that's comin'. But he says Christmas can't be done unless he just runs away for a week or so and right back. He wants to buy or lease the living rights on that piece of Old Man Colt and another scheme he's got is to let Another go home as he wants to, he being sick and sorry, and succeed him to be care-taker of the Colt place. I brought out a letter applying for the place and I'm sending a recommendation down with it for him."

And Uncle Griffin began to blow Mrs. Campbell's corns for the third time on his pipes.

"And," went on Uncle Gyp as he stopped for breath to renew again his attack on the corns. "this Allan has a great plan for savin' all this north country. He says most of it ain't fit for no human to live in and it will take centuries and more to get it so it is fit to be a home. The thing to do he says is to plant trees and in a generation or so we can begin cutting logs again—just when the world needs more lumber. He's a smart feller and I agree with him."

Mr. Gyp blew another bar or two on the pipes.

"These lumber kings ought to be made to plant trees and to grow new forests instead of putting settlers up here to wait for two generations before there is real farming possible."

And Mr. Gyp began again on his pipes.

The Bohemian family living behind the Gyp store heard the music and the whole family came to the windows to better drink in the lively tunes which so seldom came to the hard life of Ragen's Camp.

VI.

Allan Wakefield received his sentence of death on the morning of October 1. It was a gloomy day, of the fall, one of the days that Chicago once in a while provides. Somehow the sun had never shone so brightly nor the air been so delicious. He had inhaled it along with soft coal dust and smells of the loop. He had been gazed only for a moment. It was the same feeling that came over him when the whole family came to the windows to better drink in the lively tunes which so seldom came to the hard life of Ragen's Camp.

At a few minutes before three he was at the station. He had taken just eight minutes to tell Vivian Carson that he was going away, that he had been sentenced to die, that he did not want to die and was not going to die without a fight, that she could not possibly be tied to a man who was so close to the end of life, that he loved her and wanted to live but that he would release her from any obligation to marry him and that until he could come to her a well free man without the fear of immediate death she was released.

There had been a gasping sob, a few choking protests but with a ruthlessness he did not feel, he had hanged up the receiver and gone out through the gate to the train.

To his parents he had written a line. It was brief and as his father remarked valuable for what it did not say. "I have been told by Dr. Barker that I have three months in which to live. He adds that there is no possible hope for me no matter what the medical attention is, that my lungs are gone from the gas and the exposure. I do not believe him—that is I do not want to believe him and I do not purpose to quit without a fight. The most terrible thing in the world to me is a useless man or woman sitting about waiting for the execution of a sentence of death. I won't do it. So I am going away and at the end of three months if able to be moved, I will return. If I am well or better I will come back. If unable to get home I will notify you three months from this day."

Sitting by the fireside that Christmas eve Allan Wakefield smoked and watched the wood glow into flame, die into living coals, then fade to ashes. Another had just gone away with the owner of the pine tract. Another, the big silent Scot, had after ten years become homesick and tired of his own country. But never would he give up for he magnified his office like St. Paul, and no one until Allan Wakefield came, had any of the requisite necessary as he considered them, to succeed him. Now Albert Colt, the rival in business, and enemy in law, of the great Carson interests, had come north in his private car and was taking Another back to Chicago. In the place of the Scotchman was Allan Wakefield who had told the main faced lumberman as he listened, why he came to the place, how Mr. Gyp had aided him and further and most important, he was of the opinion that he, Allan Wakefield, did not wish now or in the near future to return to Chicago as a place of residence. To the contrary he would study, in fact he would study forestry and reforestation and wanted to be the leader and proponent and experimenter in the north woods in raising pine and spruce on these great deserts, wastes which as cut-over lands the millionaires were selling for farms.

It took Albert Colt, who was a hard headed Yankee and a stubborn person nearly the whole day to get over the fact there was anything to the plan. But he at last made a concession and a start. Allan Wakefield, son of that Wakefield who is best known as a king in the steel business in Chicago became care taker of the estate of the Colt Lumber Company on the Chain of Lakes and with a free hand to do anything he pleased with the property so long as he did not move it. He was to try the experiment of reforestation a tract at one end where long years before the heavy timber had been cut and since the area had made it a barrier of fallen logs, second growth and brambles.

This was what Allan Wakefield was thinking about at 10 o'clock at night. He was thinking as he looked about the low roofed comfortable cabin how long the evenings would be all alone. But exile was better than death and he had won the race with death in three months. It had been a fading light but he was nearly done. Seven more days he would walk into the home of John Wakefield show them that he was right and take the earliest train back to the pine woods.

There was a little thrill of delight in it all—saddened by the thought of Vivian Carson. He grew restless, walked up and down the room, and threw a log in the fire. Later, it was almost 11 o'clock, he put on his leather lined jacket, bundled up his head and taking his skates went to the border of the lake. It was a beautiful night and the ice, without snow gleamed a great field of crystal in the long distance until it dissolved in the shore across with the heavy border of pine trees clear to the water's edge.

He struck out down the crooked winding river, and as the cold air came he breathed great gusts of breath. In his veins the blood tingled. He had skated before but now it seemed that he was possessed of the same old spirit that had given him strength for the long marches and the fighting hikes the year before. He turned sharply around, a concealed beam and was amazed to see ahead of him another skating figure, moving with an almost imperceptible glide. Whoever it was he was on the property of the Colt Lumber Co. and Allan knew it was his duty to know that person. It was a long pull—that chase. He came close enough at last to know he was pursuing not a man but a woman. She had given a little gasping cry as he came near and with renewed energy had swept along gaining on him no matter how hard he tried.

But he called to her reassuringly. She gave no heed and he threw all his energy into the strides he now made. Scott they were at another lake and he cut across a sharp bend, heading her off. There was no dodging him now. He felt something snap in his chest and something warm on his lips, staggered and fell directly in her path. She could no swerve and over his prostrate body came the skating girl.

Her hands went out, one of them caught in the muffler, sweeping it from his face.

In a moment she was fighting for his life. Over and over she was calling his name. "Allan! Allan!"

He heard her. He reached out his hand and touched her.

"I am not dead, am I?" he whispered. "And you are alive? Are you Vivian?"

"Why of course I am. And I was so sure that I was to be forgotten this Christmas Eve and now look, Allan, I have you and I am never going to let you get away."

She helped him back to the cabin and had it not been so far away from that civilization of the highest type where anything natural is scandal, both the Wakefield and the Carson families would have been compromised at the lateness of the hour when Miss Vivian Carson left the care taker's cabin on the Colt tract and went skating home to the Three Lakes Club House. There Carson was walking the floor and waiting for the skater to return with news of his daughter.

VI.

The cabin on the Colt place is occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Allan Wakefield. The whole thing, said Chicago, was a horrible mess. The idea of a girl throwing herself away on a man who had a hobby. To live in the woods was criminal. But all the Wakefields and Carsons, on this Christmas Eve will listen to Uncle Griffin Gyp say the "Campbells are comin'" and have other joys, one of which will be Life, another Liberty and the third, the Pursuit of Happiness. That was what the United States fought the Revolutionary war over.

Started Another One.

E. H. writes in the "Bright Sayings of Children" department of the Chicago Tribune:

Our aunt was extremely fond of her shepherd dog and missed him so much when he died that she adopted a little puppy. The next day Artie went over to visit her, and when he came home he announced that Aunt Emma was so lonesome for Shep that she's started another dog."

Americans Made Good Kings Many Yankee Adventurers Have Been Crowned Rulers of South Sea Isles.

Wall street acquaintances are wondering what became of Archibald C. Everett, former stock broker, who after going broke on the market emigrated to the island of Arrai, in the Gilbert archipelago, and became king. Word has not been received in years from King Everett, as he called himself.

His name was resurrected from the limbo of forgotten things in the financial district following the recent newspaper story concerning Robert A. McClain, a former member of the Navy, who claimed to be the heir of the sultan of a small protectorate in the Philippines.

Everett married the daughter of the King of Arrai, and on the death of his royal father-in-law assumed the purple.

To be a monarch, if only over gentle South Sea island cannibals, has been the day dream of generations of small boys. There are many authenticated instances of Americans who have actually become rulers of outlandish nations, and who have even attained a certain tacit recognition from the world powers. Every now and then reports drift in from the torrid, sunlit islands of the South Seas of an American, an Englishman, or perhaps a Frenchman, who has seized the government and crown of some dot of land in the Pacific. In solitary splendor, perhaps the only white man within a radius of a thousand miles, he reigns over his dusky subjects.

Carpenter Becomes King.
Back in 1840 William Webster, a ship carpenter on a whaler, landed in New Zealand, then inhabited mainly by savages. He became the king of a large part of the country. During the expedition to New South Wales he had caused a fortune by selling supplies to settlers. Not many years ago his heirs sued the New Zealand government for $2,500,000 for land which they claimed belonged to their royal ancestor.

King Patrick was another genial monarch whose doing added to the gaiety of nations. His last name was Watkins. This Irish-American was king of the island of Galapagos, off the coast of Ecuador. He was somewhat of a tyrant, according to all accounts. Hapless sailors, particularly British, who were captured by his subjects, were made slaves. His Majesty, during a journey to the mainland in search of a bride, was arrested. He died in prison.

Edward Thompson of Albion, Ill., became a king of the South Sea islands. He shipped from San Francisco for the romantic South Sea Islands. He drifted eventually to Naluk, one of the Fiji group, and married Princess Lakanita. During an attack by a neighboring clan he led the royal army to victory. On the death of the king, he mounted the throne. King Edward died in 1910 after a reign of twenty-five years.

King David O'Keefe of the island of Yap, on the coast of China, became a monarch because of a shipwreck. Patriotically he flew the Stars and Stripes during his thirty years as a king.

When he sailed on the voyage that was to lead to a throne he left a wife and a daughter in Savannah, Ga. But he forgot the beauty of the daughter of the King of Yap. In 1901, after thirty years in Yap, he sailed for America with two of his sons. The ship and all the board were lost at sea. King David left an estate of $1,000,000.

Navy Man Spurned Crown.
Former Lieut.-Commander Charles E. Ripley refused to become a king. During a cruise with the navy King Malletoa, ruler of one of the Samoan islands, met him and named him as his heir. When King Malletoa died the world powers bequeathed Ripley to accept the crown, but he refused because his wife objected to leaving the United States.

John Davis Murray, a graduate of Purdue University, became a king for business reasons. He was crowned King of the Christmas Islands, three specks of land 250 miles south of Java, with impressive ceremonies, because the natives who owned the phosphate deposits refused to obey any one but King Murray, after serving in the dual role of an engineer and a ruler for twenty years, finally abdicated.

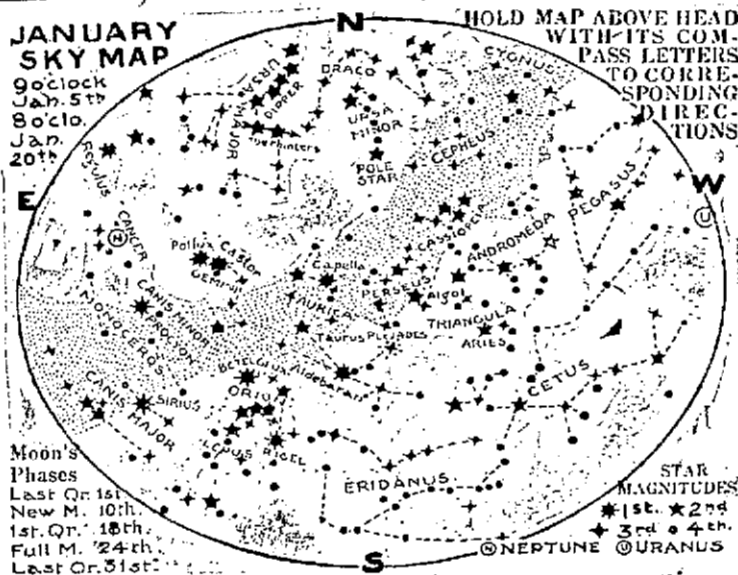

Carl Haffke, a former Omaha messenger boy, who served under Admiral Dewey at Manila Bay, became ruler of 100,000 members of the Alcano tribes in the Philippines. Haffke was a German by birth. He might have been king of the tribe yet if it were not for the fact that he returned to Nebraska, got married and took up the practice of law.

Perhaps the only adventurous American who ever seized control of an alien land to whose name immortality has clung was Gen. William Walker, President of Nicaragua. Walker was a genius, a man of vision and an idealist. He sought to unite the Central American republics into a single powerful and wealthy nation. His expedition consisted of barely 100 Americans and Europeans, rough and ready characters of the gold rush in California. Like Cortes, he conquered a country with a handful of men.

Finally he was overpowered in a war with Honduras. He died facing a firing squad.

THE HEAVENS IN JANUARY

By DR. C. S. BRAININ,
Of the Columbia University Observatory Staff.

Beautiful, white Venus continues to glow in the western sky, appearing right after the setting of the sun; except for the moon, it is the brightest of all the celestial bodies of the night, and is easily visible, even in the early twilight, long before the brighter of the first-magnitude stars have become distinguishable to the naked eye.

Venus is moving eastward in the sky, with respect to the sun, and therefore getting up higher in the sky at sunset and staying above the horizon longer. Toward the end of the month and in February it will set shortly after 9 o'clock and thus make its appearance on the monthly map.

Stars are still close to Venus and are also visible after sunset, but not quite so early as the latter planet. Jupiter and Saturn are both evening stars, rising before midnight, not early enough, however, to appear on the 3 o'clock map, but it will not be very long before they will be found there.

Uranus and Neptune are the only members of the solar family on the map this month, the former far down in the western horizon and the latter at the opposite point of the compass, not far above the horizon in the east.

Collection of Great Stars.
The great collection of first-magnitude stars in the part of the heavens surrounding Orion is now in excellent position for observation, and it has moved toward the west sufficiently by 9 o'clock to bring the leading constellation of Taurus, the Bull, right up to the meridian, where, if found, that gem of the star cluster, the Taurus constellation, is slightly behind the cluster, and then on Orion, the two Dogs, and, to the northward, Gemini, the Heavenly Twins.

Last month we discussed Orion and its Belt of three stars of equal magnitude so placed that the line between the two is almost half-way between the other two. If you prolong the Belt westward, it points fairly well to Aldebaran, the eye of the Bull, and points to Sirius, the Greater Dog.

The Twins are easily recognized, because of their equal brightness and proximity. Their distance apart is about half again as great as the length of Orion's belt. Between Sirius and Gemini is the Lesser Dog, Procyon. Its name means the fore-runner of the dog, because it rises somewhat earlier than Sirius itself.

Almost overhead is Capella, a great white star, whose light resembles in quality or color that of the sun. Capella is several hundred times as great a radiator of light as the sun, and if we were on a possibly existing planet of Capella the latter would appear to us as less than a star of the fifth magnitude, just on the border line of visibility.

Capella is the third brightest star visible from our latitude; it is exceeded in brilliancy only by Sirius and Vega, which has already set. Its distance from the earth is about thirty-four light years or thirty-four times 365 times twenty-four times sixty times sixty times 156,000 miles. The spectroscopic shows that Capella is moving away from the solar system at the rate of twenty miles per second, and it also shows another very interesting fact—that Capella is really not one single star, but a binary star, a double sun, composed of two stars revolving about their common center of gravity. They take about 101 days to go around one another at an average distance of about 50,000,000 miles. The name of the constellation to which Capella belongs is Auriga, the Charioteer, but the word Capella itself means "the goat."

Twin Brothers of the Heavens.
Pollux and Castor, the Twin Brothers of the Heavens, also are interesting stars. In spite of the fact that they belong to the same constellation and are always thought of together, they are in no way closely connected with each other physically. They do not form a single system revolving about its common center of gravity. On the other hand, Castor itself is a double star, which can easily be separated in a small telescope.

And, furthermore, the spectroscopic has shown that each of these components of what we call Castor is itself a double, so that what we see as one single star with the naked eye is resolved by the astronomer's instruments into a magnificent system of four sun-stars. Each pair revolves about the pair's own center of gravity and at the same time it revolves about the common center of all four.

The earth and moon revolve similarly about their common center of gravity at the same time that they, as a unit, revolve about the center of gravity of the entire solar system, which, however, lies within the bulk of the sun.

The entire Castor system is approaching the earth at the rate of about eleven miles per second, while at the same time its apparent "twins," Pollux, is receding from us at about one-twentieth this speed. Castor is called Alpha Geminorum, in accordance with the original naming of this system, but at present Pollux, Beta, Geminorum, is slightly the brighter of the two. This probably means that when these names were given, Castor was the brighter of the two.

The constellation of Leo, the Lion, is rising over the western horizon at moon time, and its brightest star, Regulus, has already attained an altitude of several degrees. Except where the horizon is unusually free from obstruction, Regulus and the rest of the constellation do not become objects for observation for an hour or more after map time.

Regulus is a first-magnitude star of a slightly yellowish tint. Just above it is the Sickle, of which it forms the lowest part of the handle. Several stars extend outward in a straight line, forming the blade, and the blade is composed of a semi-circle of stars open to the west.

Chrstsmas Doll's Life
Began Centuries Ago

On Christmas morning when the delighted child goes down to the manger and finds a doll peeping out from the recess of a stocking, the glad display will be ever a toy as old as civilization itself. Search among the Janesville toy shops and research into the history of dolls shows that this ever popular plaything came into existence soon after man became civilized.

Janesville store keepers state that the early dolls were made as images of gods and were used for religious purposes. The earliest dolls came from the oldest of ancient lands—the Orient.

Could Even "Talk."

Even in those days the dolls were in no sense crude, primitive creatures. True they did not have the finery and complete silks and satins the modern expensive doll is "dolled" up in but then as now the dolls walked, slept and even talked. The wise old Hindus used to put a trained startling inside a doll and alleged the image talked.

The dolls of ancient Europe had paddle shaped bodies, constructed in black and white squares, checker board pattern. Some references at the Janesville library state these Egyptian dolls were used by the kids of Nile for both a plaything and by their parents for playing a game similar to chess or checkers.

It was in China and Japan, however, where the doll reached its fullest development. Doll making became such a craft that they branched out into puppet and shadow doll shows. And there also the poly-doll, which will not lie down was born.

Dolls in China

Freak dolls made from donkey skin came out of China at an early date. The Chinese doll artists also soon spread out into the making of images of fishes and animals with which they staged shadow and queer exhibitions and are now famous.

Reference books state of a curious doll custom that persisted for a long time in Japan. At the birth of a Japanese girl baby the child would receive what was known as a "hina" consisting of a set of dolls, representing the mikado and wife. Each doll was seated on a dais. There were musicians and frequently courtiers and other members of the royal family, according to the wealth of the child's parents.

Became Heirloom

As the girl grew older she guarded her "hina" and at marriage it became the property of her husband and then at the marriage of the eldest son, the dolls became his property to be passed on in every generation. It was a hobby in Japan to collect dolls even among adults.

Doll day is the gala occasion for the millions in Japan. Hundreds of thousands of dolls for all descriptions are offered for sale. More dolls, it is said, are sold in the islands of Asia on that day than in the entire United States for Christmas.

Dolls as Sacrifice

In India the story of the doll is less joyous than in Tokio. It is a custom of the little East Indian children on a certain day to bring their dolls to the banks of the Ganges. With heavy heart they throw their pets into the river, for it is law among them that these waters shall receive a sacrifice from even the children.

Nation's Dolls

Each nation had its own type of doll. Russia from an early date had the St. Nicholas doll clad in a suit of white and sporting fierce mustaches and whiskers. The reference contained no illusion to a now-a-days Bolshevik doll.

Even the savages of Africa had dolls. Among some tribes it is a custom to make a doll for his grave. Some tribes form a custom of putting these funeral dolls together in a hut under the illusion the souls of the dead tribesmen were embodied in the images of wood with ivory ornaments.

Yankee Dolls

Janesville store keepers point out that the United States is the home of the Kewpie, teddy-bear, the jumbo doll and a hundred other freaks which come and go in a passing fancy of doll fashion.

So when the Janesville boy or girl starts hugging the new doll Santa Claus brought Christmas morning she is not doing anything new. The kids did the same thing long before Christ was born.

Yankee Made

Merchants here also point out with pride that the great bulk of toys on the Christmas market this year are pure American make. Toy makers in America, they say, have turned out more than enough dolls for domestic use and they are as good as any ever made in Germany.

Cut off from German exports, the Americans turned toy makers. The quality of their goods demonstrates that they succeeded in beating the Germans at their own game, especially in the matter of doll making for the features are more life like.

WHO WILL BE PRETTIEST DEBUTANTE OF SEASON AT CAPITAL? HERE'S ONE ENTRY

Miss Mary Louise Johnson.

The list of pretty society misses who will join the ranks of the debutantes at Washington, D. C., grows almost daily. And each girl seems to bid for the title of "prettiest of the season." Miss Mary Louise Johnson, daughter of Paul Ewart Johnson, attorney, is one of the charming maids who will be a debutante.

Women Will Give Up a Lot
to Get Thin

The Greek vase, it is well known, was modeled on the beautiful and inspirational lines of a woman's body. That, of course, happened in the day when women were well fed. Verus herself, as you may see in the Louvre, was a plump goddess, though not portly, and ate her fill of ambrosia. And the other goddesses followed the example of the goddess of love. Never a Grecian woman deity will you find, though you cull the pages of the Age of Helle from now until the millennium, who was not prettily and plumply curved.

Behold now how the young woman of today has departed from the ideal set before her by the storied beauties of old. If the girl of today is to serve as the working model of any article, it will be not a Greek vase, but a clothespin. Thinness has grown to be the desire of all her dreams, and to attain it she will sacrifice luxuries, comforts, nay, necessities, to say nothing of the mere matter of her good health.

She vies with her sisters in her efforts to be bony, and the apple of Paris, were it left to the fair sex to bestow, would go today to the young woman whose collar bones jutted forth into the most exultingly prominent ones, and whose skirts hung most loosely upon the skeleton promontories where once were hips.

The young woman of today speaks of fast as a crime. "Aren't you a bit plumper than you were, my dear?" is taken as a deadly insult and "I think you're looking rather thin" is rewarded by a glow of satisfaction and a "thank you" of vivacious sincerity.

And to attain the desired end, which is to look like an accidental edition of an oriental famine sufferer, the style-maddened young thing will sip un-sweetened tea—or tea sweetened sickly with drugs instead of sugar, she will develop a positive hatred of desserts and she will regard breadstuffs and potatoes with suspicion and dislike only to be equaled by the loathing with which she looks upon butter and oils. Thus, she takes unto her long suffering stomach a diet overloaded with proteins—for the system must have something, and denied sugars, starches and fats it will do its best to satisfy its longings on meat—and she acquires indigestion and nerves, and presently she is thin in good earnest.

That she is wearing her nervous system to a frazzle and that she is every day increasing her susceptibility to colds and coughs, and diseases of the lung worries her not at all. Her cheekbones and her shoulder blades are craggy, her hands are like bird claws, her bony structure is indecently exposed; her skirts hang limply about scrawny calves. But she is smartly, modestly, gloriously, daintily thin, and she is happy.—Detroit News.

Did you ever know a boy to let his now watch run down?

A Letter from Home

Dear Mother:
Nothing could have pleased me more than your Christmas gift, a year's subscription to the Gazette. It is like a great big letter from home every day bringing to me the news of all the folks in whom I'm interested. It brings the home town and its affairs close to me each evening.

Believe me, it was the best Christmas gift ever.

Love from,
Joe.

ULSTER LEADER GIVES
CHRISTMAS MESSAGE

Belfast, Ireland, Dec. 24.—Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster Unionist leader, in a Christmas message today to the people of Belfast says: "I am afraid the present Christmas is many parts of Ireland finds little subject for congratulations on the peace that ought to reign at such a time. The crimes and outrages which are doing so much to ruin the fair name of Ireland are in themselves a blot on that Christianity, the birth of which we celebrate at this time. But let our prayers be offered that a great change may soon be brought about, and let us in Ulster try and show the example by carrying out the doctrines of the religion to which we adhere to the great benefit of all people and to the glory of Christianity."
